Wandering From Whence We Came, What Do We Leave Behind?

As the Humphrey Lytteltons of life play the trumpets of destiny in the jazz club of eternity, we wish you a happy and prosperous future. Above all, beware the Calibans of this world... and no, Humph had nothing to do with the Gunpowder Plot...

For Hope and Rebirth

As ever, many thanks to all Good News contributors; writers, sifters and wranglers of content, proof readers, printers and distributors; all those that collaborate across time and travels, in all sorts of ways to produce and deliver all of the wonderful resources into which we dip and find treasures to share.

Most of all, thank You, for reading this magazine.

Worth mentioning: The Tempest's run finishes at the RSC in Stratford Upon Avon on the 4th March 2023.

Spring 2023

North West Northants Pastorate

One of the good things about walking the country lanes and tracks during the winter can be that the ground is frosted and hard underfoot, crisp, and clean, allowing an easy and swift passage, which is just as well if trying to keep warm.

The appearance of the first snowdrops however reminds us that a change is coming, soon the ground softens and eventually turns to mud and puddles of murky water.

Now heavy going and sometimes making for tedious progress, with the added danger of an unplanned close inspection of the ground.

At some times of the year, some paths are best avoided, your own experience will tell you this.

Also, the shared experience of the wider community, those that have trod those paths before.

Of course we should always test and examine things for ourselves; but forearmed and forewarned we might fare much better on our adventures out in the wild if we communicate and share wisdom.

Wisdom tells us that sometimes things must get worse before they can get better, all the more reason to keep going, to glimpse that beautiful blue clear sky, with its promise of spring...

"...because it was impossible for death to keep its hold on him "

(Acts 2:24, NIV)

Wishing You a Blessed and Joy Filled Easter!

Poets Corner

From the Romantic to the Lyric

I Hope you enjoyed the quote from the romantic poet Wordsworth earlier. Those of you that know me, may have noticed that sometimes I include pop song lyrics in my writings, and indeed sermons.

And so it is here, that you find me moving from the Romantic to the Lyric:

“Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air;
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.”

(William Shakespeare, The Tempest, Act IV, Scene 1)

I will leave you to ponder what sort of poet George Wilson was (apart from Scottish that is...)

Romantic, Lyric, Other?

“Sir, I am vex'd;
Bear with my weakness; my, brain is troubled:
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity:
If you be pleased, retire into my cell
And there repose: a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.”

(William Shakespeare, The Tempest, Act IV, Scene 1)

As Ferdinand and Miranda once said:

“We wish your peace.”

A Late Night Reflection: And The Page Fell Open...

Coming together, drifting apart and moving on

A Prayer of Approach and Confession

...We come to worship You O King of the Ages,
but puzzle at this thing called kingship.
Aren't kings meant to be powerful?
Shouldn't they have security and attendants?
Surely they ride in state - in horse and carriage?
Yet you rode on a donkey – hardly befitting a king!
Your attendants were a rag bag of assorted fools,
no red carpet, no preparation,
just the shouts of fickle crowds with makeshift palms.
And where, O King, was your security?
Kings aren't supposed to be put on trial and executed.
What type of king are you?

As we ponder your crucified victory, we confess that we've failed to understand You.
We've acclaimed you as king without thinking about what You mean by kingship.
We've grumbled about crucifixes without thinking of the pain you endured...

Staying Cheerful

Hello Everyone,

As I write this, there are Snowdrops all around, under the hedges and on the banks. Some seem isolated and others stand proudly in groups and clusters, after all it is good to have a sense of belonging. It is the nature of things to hope, that even the single snowdrops, will one day be part of a cluster.

The Snowdrop is one the birth flowers for those born in January (the other being the Carnation, which represents Love).

Some people say the small and delicate snowdrop is a symbol of hope and rebirth. Occurring in the winter months leading up to spring it shows us that even the seemingly most delicate of living things can overcome the greatest difficulties the world might throw at it.

Should this not inspire us to try to overcome our own difficulties, so that we might live to see the "...host, of golden daffodils; beside the lake, beneath the trees, Fluttering and dancing in the breeze..." as Wordsworth put it?

Opposing the cold winds of oppression, standing up to be counted, hope and rebirth...

Reminds me of someone.

Talking of which, Lent. Now what have you given up? Did you have pancakes? Or are you doing something extra? Different people, different traditions, different ideas.

Some people over the years have fasted because they are trying to demonstrate regret and repentance for their sins, other people, these days fast in order to lose weight, yet others fast because they have no food.

Hannah Hill, Lodge Lane,

Some Observations

There are lots of people in the world with no food, no place to go and no hope, there always have been. Even in this country, the cost of living crisis is seeing people previously relatively secure begin to fear for the future. We know this. But what to do?

What brings hope, rebirth and love to those that need them most?

Action, not words; by joining with those around us who are already making an effort to bring comfort and support to others. So, not necessarily just our own effort, but that shared from a wider community, those that have trod those paths before¹.

But all of this requires sacrifice, sacrifice of our own share of whatever we have.

Sacrifice leading to rebirth, hope and love.

During this time, the snowdrops become the daffodils, and the daffodils become the bluebells, and the cowslips and all the promise of summer warmth and on into the distant harvest, what promise!

What kind of harvest do we want to be?

“And thus the snowdrop, like the bow
That spans the cloudy sky,
Becomes a symbol whence we know
That brighter days are nigh ;”

From the Scottish poet George Wilsons poem; ‘The Origin of the snowdrop’

A Message for All

From Cecil and Pam from Kilsby.

Agreements

Twenty-five years ago, on the 10th of April 1998, two documents were signed in Belfast. One, known as the Multi Party Agreement was signed by Tony Blair, Bertie Ahern and Parties from Northern Ireland.

The other, the British and Irish Agreement, was signed by Tony Blair, Bertie Ahern, Mo Mowlam and David Andrews, and was between the Governments of the UK and Republic of Ireland.

This making a North South agreement and an east west agreement. Together they became known as the Good Friday Agreement. According to the UK Government web site 'It underpins Northern Ireland's peace, its constitutional settlements, and its institutions.

The Republic of Ireland, 26 of the 32 Counties of Ireland gained its freedom from the UK in 1922, the remaining Counties, Ulster (Northern Ireland), chose to remain within the UK, but there had been sporadic uprisings between the two over many years. The latest of these and the one the Treaties had been signed to end, lasted for 30 years and had become known as The Troubles.

It is interesting to notice that this 25th anniversary of the peace treaty being signed also falls on Easter weekend when we remember an even greater peace treaty being signed, this time being signed with the blood of the Peace Maker.

A Message for All

From Cecil and Pam from Kilsby.

We could say God and man had been at war for millennia, since Adam and Eve disobeyed God and brought a distance between them that God had not intended. Over the intervening years there had been times when God blessed His chosen people, and times when He had to correct them by allowing them to be overrun by neighbouring countries, and finally taken into captivity.

Then, at the time of God's choosing He sent His Son to make peace between God and man. That first Good Friday when Jesus called out from the cross, 'It is finished' God's work of peace-making was done.

The peace treaty is signed but I wonder if this Easter we are experiencing peace in our hearts. The peace that comes from recognising that Christ's blood was shed so that we can have a personal relationship with God the Creator and Sustainer of all things?

What of the other two parts of the 'Good Friday Agreement'? Its constitutional settlements, and its institutions? Northern Ireland has had self-government (unfortunately we have to say off and on) since 1999, and currently that government is not now sitting.

For the individual, we may know and obey God's Constitution and institutions, as we find them in the Bible, when we align ourselves with Him by accepting Him as Lord and Saviour and leader of our lives.

May each of us experience much of the Lord's blessing as we celebrate the first Good Friday Agreement, and the following Resurrection Morning this Easter.

Happy Easter to you all!

The Story Behind the Hymn

When is a hymn not a hymn?

Let's start off by defining 'hymn'; from the Greek, hymnos; a song in praise of God – a worship song. Yes, it's a worship song, so a worship song, can be a hymn (careful wording there for those of you who know about 'set theory').

Perhaps, if we are to be intergenerational in our worship, we must be intergenerational in our worship songs.

In his article 'A Brief History of Contemporary Christian Music' for SchoolOfTheRock.com™, Paul D. Race wrote; (US. English)

"One thing that putting this brief history together has done is make me realize just how old I am - four decades have passed since I wrote and performed my first Christian song. I also realize that the musical "language" we tried to speak in my youth is not the language in which young people speak today. But it reminds me of how important appropriate music is to believers, and how much prayer and - if possible - other support we owe to those who bless us through Christ-centered music today."

(Source, https://schooloftherock.com/html/a_brief_history_of_contemporar.html)

Remember this? (Not a worship song)

"Give us this day
All that you showed me
The power and the glory
'Til my kingdom come.

Give me all the
Storybook told me
The faith and the glory
'Til my kingdom comes."

(Extract from Hymn, Ultravox, 1982)

This song by Ultravox described the demands of corrupt and worldly ambitions, of a fall from grace, where all that's good is left behind; (the power and the glory, are Gods alone). There are those who would say, it summed up the 1980's quite well really...

Sad News

It is with the greatest regret that we have to announce the death of Reg Thomas. He died peacefully on 13th February with two of his sons by his side.

He and his wife Jean became members at Creaton in 2003 when they moved from Northampton. Reg had been an active member at Broadmead Baptist Church in Northampton before they moved to Creaton.

Reg had run the Northampton branch of TORCH at Bethany Homestead until the last few months of his life. He had served on Creaton Parish Church until recently. His wife Jean died in 2022. He was a much loved member of the church who will be sorely missed.

The Story Behind the Hymn

Shine Jesus Shine by Graham Kendrick

Half an hour later it was written 'all but some polishing'

Suitably polished::

"Shine, Jesus, shine, fill this land with the Father's glory
Blaze, Spirit, blaze, set our hearts on fire
Flow, river, flow, flood the nations with grace and mercy
Send forth Your word, Lord, and let there be light."

(Graham Kendrick, Shine Jesus Shine, 1987, Chorus)

If you are like me, it is temptingly easy to sit back on the tried and tested comfort of our traditional hymns and dismiss the more, so-called, contemporary worship songs as 'happy clappy'... But there is more to it than that, a lot more.

Damian Thompson, editor-in-chief of the Catholic Herald, called "Shine, Jesus, Shine" "the most loathed of all happy-clappy hymns."

That statement alone, for me, is enough reason to like this worship song.

As it happens, I love it!

Go on, I know you all want to rush off and play it on YouTube...

I used to think that 'Michael row the boat ashore' and 'Lord of the dance' were modern and so might appeal to the young, how silly was I? Not exactly 'on trend'.

Well, if we don't speak the language of the young, why will they listen, how can they even hear?

The Story Behind the Hymn

Shine Jesus Shine by Graham Kendrick

Also known as “Lord, the light of your love is shining”

Did you know that Graham Kendrick was a native of Blisworth, Northamptonshire, the son of a Baptist pastor?

The idea for his song came about when he had been contemplating the holiness of God and how God wanted the community of believers to live continually in His presence.

Initially Graham wrote three verses with this in mind, the first verse focuses on Christ as the light in the world, and being set free by the truth.

“Lord, the light of Your love is shining
In the midst of the darkness, shining
Jesus, light of the world, shine upon us
Set us free by the truth You now bring us
Shine on me, shine on me”

(Graham Kendrick, Shine Jesus Shine, 1987, Verse 1)

The second verse tells of coming into the awesome presence of Christ, the brightness of Christ drowning the/my/our darkness. The third verse, perhaps how we might reflect Christ's brightness outwards.

These verses were performed in his home church successfully, but then put on the back burner.

That was until he was asked to write some new songs for a conference song book. Upon looking at his three verse song again, Graham realised that it needed a chorus. The line ‘Shine, Jesus, Shine’ came to mind.

Seasonal Madness

For what we are about to receive...

A bit like the lambs that bounce (albeit briefly) in the fields, this poem leapt out at me...

I heard a thousand blended notes,
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

To her fair works did Nature link
The human soul that through me ran;
And much it grieved my heart to think
What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that green bower,
The periwinkle trailed its wreaths;
And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

The birds around me hopped and played,
Their thoughts I cannot measure:-
But the least motion which they made
It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

The budding twigs spread out their fan,
To catch the breezy air;
And I must think, do all I can,
That there was pleasure there.

If this belief from heaven be sent,
If such be Nature's holy plan,
Have I not reason to lament
What man has made of man?

(William Wordsworth, "The Longman Anthology of Poetry", published by Pearson, 2006)

My mother used to love a leg of lamb for Easter Sunday diner, it would have been quite a treat in those days, definitely a once a year thing.

Not like today when we can have it every day, how much!?... Oh dear... maybe we can share an oven...

I mean, you wouldn't
Would you?
